INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this report is to show how your results from the Personality assessment can help you understand your behavior and the behavior of others in your organization. Information from the Personality Assessment tool can help you maximize the impact of your actions, identify options for increasing your job satisfaction and productivity, and explore alternative ways to achieve your goals. This report provides an explanation of your results and then considers how your results can help you:

- Plan your career development
- Increase your job satisfaction
- Improve your effectiveness on teams
- Identify the strengths and weaknesses of your leadership style

This assessment emerged in the mid-20th century, during a time when psychologists were actively studying group behavior and interpersonal dynamics—especially after World War II, when teamwork became critical in military and organizational settings. The framework was developed by William Schutz in the late 1950s. He was working with the U.S. Navy, where there was a need to understand why some groups performed effectively while others struggled, even when members had similar technical skills.

The Personality Assessment tool measures your interpersonal needs in three areas.

INCLUSION [I]

The need for Inclusion relates to forming new relations and associating with others; it determines the extent of contact and prominence that a person seeks. Descriptors include:

- belonging • recognition
- involvement • distinction
- participation

CONTROL [C]

The need for Control relates to decision making, influence, and persuasion between people; it determines the extent of power or dominance that a person seeks. Descriptors include:

- power • responsibility
- authority • consistency
- influence

AFFECTION [A]

The need for Affection relates to emotional ties and warm connections between people; it determines the extent of closeness that a person seeks. Descriptors include:

- personal ties • support
- consensus • openness
- sensitivity

For each of the three interpersonal needs — Inclusion, Control, and Affection — the Personality Assessment tool also provides a measure of how much each need is expressed or wanted by you.

EXPRESSED [e]

The extent to which you will initiate the behavior.

WANTED [w]

The extent to which you want or will accept that behavior from others.

Factors That Can Influence Results

The following sections provide an interpretation of your Personality Assessment results and show how they can be applied to help you understand your behavior in an organization. However, as you think about the meaning of your results, keep in mind that a number of extraneous factors may have affected how you responded to the Personality Assessment items. Try to determine whether any of these may have influenced your results:

- Life events that lead to intense self-reflection or withdrawal from others (this will alter all of your results, but especially your need for Wanted Inclusion)
- Cultural differences affecting the expression of needs
- Misunderstanding the terms
- Consciously trying to avoid extreme responses (which usually results in a majority of results in the medium range)
- Pressure from your environment to express certain behaviors

Your Individual Needs

Each of the six individual needs can be defined by statements about characteristic behaviors, as shown in the table below. Your results are estimates of how much each of the interpersonal dimensions is characteristic of you.

Characteristic Behavior	Your Results	What Your Results Indicate
Expressed Inclusion [eI] I make an effort to include others in my activities. I try to belong, to join social groups, and to be with others as much as possible.	3 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 3 suggests that you will usually disagree with these statements and prefer to work more independently, with limited social engagement.
Wanted Inclusion [wI] I want other people to include me in their activities and to invite me to belong. I enjoy it when others notice me.	3 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 3 suggests that you will usually disagree with these statements and tend not to seek or expect inclusion from others.
Expressed Control [eC] I try to exert control and influence over things. I enjoy organizing things and directing others.	7 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 7 suggests that you will usually agree with these statements and enjoy taking charge, organising activities, and influencing others.
Wanted Control [wC] I feel most comfortable working in well-defined situations. I try to get clear expectations and instructions.	5 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 5 suggests that you will sometimes agree with these statements and are comfortable in both structured and unstructured environments.
Expressed Affection [eA] I make an effort to get close to people. I am comfortable expressing personal feelings, and I try to be supportive of others.	6 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 6 suggests that you will usually agree with these statements and provide a lot of warmth, encouragement, and support for others at work.
Wanted Affection [wA] I want others to act warmly toward me. I enjoy it when people share their feelings with me and when they encourage my efforts.	3 LOW MED HIGH	Your result of 3 suggests that you will usually disagree with these statements and prefer to keep interactions more formal and less personal.

YOUR OVERALL INTERPERSONAL NEEDS

3	7	6	16
3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

* Your Total Expressed Behavior score of 16 indicates a moderate-to-high tendency to initiate actions and interactions across the dimensions of Inclusion, Control, and Affection. This means you are generally active in expressing your needs and preferences in group and work settings.

* Your Total Wanted Behavior score of 11 suggests a moderate level of wanting others to initiate interactions or provide support in the areas of Inclusion, Control, and Affection.

* The difference between your expressed (16) and wanted (11) scores suggests that you tend to initiate more interpersonal behavior than you explicitly seek from others.

* You are likely to be seen as someone who takes initiative and is actively involved in group dynamics.

Your Total Needs

* Your Overall Interpersonal Need score of 27 (out of a possible 54) indicates a moderate overall reliance on human interaction.

* While you engage with others, your specific needs for inclusion, control, and affection are met through particular patterns, as detailed in the following sections.

* This moderate overall need suggests you are not compulsively driven towards or away from people, but rather have specific preferences for how you engage.

PATTERNS

3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

Your Patterns of Need Fulfillment for Inclusion

Profile: The Loner | el = 3 | wl = 3 | Total Need for Inclusion = 6

Your results on Expressed Inclusion (3) and Wanted Inclusion (3) suggest the following pattern of behaviors:

- * You are most comfortable when you can distance yourself from people or when people generally stay away from you.
- * These scores do not mean you cannot associate with others, but rather that you are highly selective about whom you choose to associate with.
- * You tend to be uncomfortable around most people and will avoid them whenever possible.
- * Your low Inclusion scores suggest a concern about being rejected.
- * Your defense mechanism is to avoid situations that might involve rejection, thereby protecting yourself by rejecting others first.

PATTERNS

Your Patterns of Need Fulfillment for Control

3	7	6	16
3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

Profile: Mission Impossible with Narcissistic Tendencies | eC = 7 | wC = 5 | Total Need for Control = 12

Your results on Expressed Control (7) and Wanted Control (5) suggest the following pattern of behaviors:

- * You are confident and capable of making decisions and assuming many responsibilities, often taking on tasks that others would typically avoid.
- * Your self-concept is one of confidence and adequacy, leading you to readily assume leadership.
- * You possess an intense need for recognition, which serves as a strong motivator to perform well and achieve.
- * You may tend to overcompensate for any real or imagined feelings of inferiority by taking on excessive responsibilities, hoping to earn the recognition you desire.
- * You also harbor a moderate need for narcissistic self-gratification, which is reflected in your wanted Control score.
- * Although there can be a conflict between your need for recognition and self-gratification, the drive for recognition is typically more dominant for you.
- * You will often attempt to satisfy both needs simultaneously by seeking pleasurable self-gratification while actively working to earn recognition.

PATTERNS

3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

Your Patterns of Need Fulfillment for Affection

Profile: Image of Intimacy | eA = 6 | wA = 3 | Total Need for Affection = 9

Your results on Expressed Affection (6) and Wanted Affection (3) suggest the following pattern of behaviors:

- * You are very selective about whom you become emotionally involved with, despite presenting an image of warmth, friendliness, and intimacy.
- * You are friendly with many people but maintain intimacy with only a select few.
- * Your expressed behavior may encourage others to seek a deeper, more intimate relationship, but these attempts are often thwarted because you do not desire deep affection from most people.
- * Due to your somewhat superficial expressed behavior in this area, you may find it challenging to believe that others are expressing genuine affection toward you.
- * Fundamentally, you approach affection with a pessimistic orientation, often wearing a "mask of intimacy."

MY BEHAVIOURAL SNAPSHOT

3	7	6	16
3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

* I tend to keep my distance from most people and am quite selective about who I choose to engage with, often avoiding social situations where I might feel exposed.

* I am confident in my abilities and readily take on leadership roles and responsibilities, especially those that others might shy away from, as I am driven by a strong need for recognition.

* I present myself as warm and friendly in group settings, but I am very cautious and selective about forming close emotional bonds.

* I often seek to achieve personal gratification while simultaneously working hard to earn recognition for my efforts and contributions.

* I may appear sociable, but I am internally selective and cautious about genuine emotional involvement, sometimes finding it hard to trust others' expressions of affection.

HOW I FUNCTION IN GROUPS

3	7	6	16
3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

* Role in teams:

- * I am likely to naturally assume leadership positions and take on significant responsibilities within a team, driven by my self-confidence and desire for recognition.
- * I will appear friendly and approachable, but I maintain a selective approach to forming deeper connections with team members.
- * My preference is to work with a chosen few, rather than engaging deeply with a large group.

* Comfort with leadership and participation:

- * I am very comfortable making decisions and leading, often stepping up to handle tasks that others might avoid.
- * I will participate actively, but my deeper engagement and emotional investment will be reserved for a select few individuals.
- * I am confident in my own judgment and seek acknowledgment for my contributions and leadership.

* Response to group dynamics:

- * If I perceive potential rejection or discomfort, I may distance myself or preemptively withdraw from social interactions within the group.
- * I might take on additional responsibilities as a way to prove my competence and gain recognition, especially if I feel any underlying insecurity.
- * I tend to be skeptical of overt displays of warmth or intimacy from others in the group, as I am selective about who I allow into my inner circle.

PEOPLE I WORK BEST WITH

3	7	6	16
3	5	3	11
6	12	9	27

* Who I work best with:

* I work best with individuals who are willing to offer me recognition and appreciation for my abilities and contributions.

* I prefer team members who allow me to take the lead and assume responsibility without attempting to control or interfere with my decisions.

* I am most comfortable with a select group of associates who respect my boundaries regarding emotional involvement and do not push for excessive intimacy.

* Potential friction points:

* I may experience friction with individuals who challenge my authority, attempt to control me, or make decisions that I believe I should be handling.

* I might find it stressful to work with people who are overly gregarious or who constantly seek deep emotional connections, as this goes against my selective nature.

* Team members who do not acknowledge my efforts or provide the recognition I desire may cause me frustration or annoyance.
